

China's SJ-17 was in compliance much more often than Russia's Luch (Olymp).

From its launch in November 2011 to the end of the study period, SJ-17 was in compliance with the physical portion of one of China's active space networks 69.7 percent of the time and out of compliance 30.3 percent of the time.

